Burglar Killed by Policeman. Night Policeman Richard B. Fairchild

discovered two burglars at work in a millinery store at Ravenna, Ohio, early yesterday. The officer entered the store and called upon the men to surrender. The latter, however, ran into the street, firing their revolvers rapidly at the officer as they retreated. Fairchild pursued, using his revolver freely. One of the burglars eventually dropped dead, shot through the heart. The other escaped. The dead bur-glar is unidentified.

Two Cents a Mile Fare. From the Providence Journal. It is believed that within five years 2 cents a mile will be the regular rate of fare on the steam roads of New England. This prediction is based on the fact that the comantes are now making concessions to travelers, who insist that 2½ cents a mile is to high a price for transportation, and that something should be done for those who cannot afford to pay $20 for a mileage book. The New York, New Haven and Hartford, which gets credit for a disposition not to be hasty in complying with requests for lower fares, has been unable to resist the pressure

MANY REQUESTS FOR TREASURY

ceints July 29-Varieties of increasing the revenues of the government," said Charles H. Miller, the acting chief of the warrants division of the treasury, the other day to Secretary Gage, as he matical computations. And this was only tary Gage found the letter to be from a man who desires to win the "bull's-eye prize" by guessing the exact amount of the receipts of the government on the 29th of July. A number of newspapers are evading the law in regard to lotteries by offering prizes upon what purports to be a question of judgment in the shape of an estimate of the receipts of the treasury upon a certain day. It is the custom in such enterprises to offer a very large prize for a guess exactly correct, since no man can do that, going, as the figures do, into cents. In the particular case in point the newspaper offers $9,000 to the person who can "hit the bull's-eye." The next largest prize is $200 to the person who makes the nearest guess.

Wanted a Sure Thing.

low, this man whose letter was brought he said the scheme was getting a great deal of money out of the poor people in his neighborhood, and was generally to be reprobated. The bull's-eye prize he thought 200 guesses at figures ranging from $1,700,-000 to $2,700,000, for the Monday upon which the 29th falls is usually a big day for re-ceipts, at intervals of $5,000 apart. He would thus surely have a guess within $2,500 of the bull's-eye. All he wanted of the official of the treasury whom he addressed was to enter into an arrangement by which the apparent receipts for that day would be telegraphed him just in time to buy enough stamps, internal revenue or postage, to bring the sum to the exact fig-

Of course, this scheme could not be made to work, even if the Treasury Department went in for such things, but the earnestness with which it was outlined, and the graduated schedule of rewards which the writer offered to his informant, made the proposal of interest. Most of the letters which these lottery schemes stimulate ask the Secretary, "as a personal favor," for an inside estimate of receipts. The writers often say that they have had a dispute with somebody as to the income of the government and desire to have it settled by having the Secretary of the Treasury tell them what would be the probable income on, say July 29, for example. Of course the treasury officials realize what all these Tips Regarding New Cabinet.

One peculiarity of all guessing contests the correct answers to which depend upon to get 'a tip from headquarters.' In the winter preceding each inauguration of a new President a great many country newspapers invite guesses on the new Presi-dent's cabinet. Sometimes they print in coupon form eight spaces in which are to be entered the names of the states from which the several cabinet members are to be chosen, something like this: State, Ohio; Treasury, Illinois; War, New York; Attorney General, Pennsylvania; Navy, Massachusetts; Interior, Missouri; Postmaster General, Pennsylvania; Agriculture, Iowa. But in whatever form these guesses are in-vited, and for whatever the prize, the first thought that occurs to many of the contestants is to write to the one man who presumably knows the correct answer-the President-elect of the United States. Many of these appeals are pathetically amusing. The writer says he has never had a prize of any sort in his life; has always had to work hard for every dollar he has ever had; has voted the ticket of the Presidentelect with unfailing regularity-even made a bet upon the success of the candidate at the recent election. It is always very embarrassing to have to tell these earnest seekers for unearned honors that it is impossible to gratify their wishes.

Yacht Racing Season On - Pleasures for Washington Folks. Special Correspondence of The Evening Star.

ALEXANDRIA BAY, N. Y., July 16, 1901. The yacht racing season began on Friday with the eighth regatta of the Chippewa Bay Yacht Club. It opened with the first of the series of three sweepstake races, and was sailed over the twelve-mile triangular course of the club.

Thursday evening Miss Julia DeWitt gave at Mr. DeWitt's cottage "a small and early" six in hand euchre party to Mrs. Thomas E. Waggaman, Mrs. W. G. Waggaman and Miss Julia Waggaman, and on Friday evening there was a charming little driving party given-again to the Wash-

But the most delightful social feature of the week just past was the trip to Cape Vincent made by Colonel Staples and a few of his friends on the Nereid. The sail carried them past some of the most beautiful scenery on the St. Lawrence. A champagne luncheon was served on board, and though the party were out all day the Nereid is so luxuriously fitted up that they came in as foesh as when they started.
Colonel and Mrs. Staples' guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Capehart, Mrs. J. C. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Gates and Dr. and Mrs.

Hodgekinson. W. W. Rapley and Mr. and Mrs. Everard Rapley left last week, followed by the regrets of the many friends they made while here. They are thinking of returning later in the summer. Among the latest arrivals from Washington are F. Petrola, J. M. Hulse and M. Mul-

PROFESSIONAL COACHES.

From the New York Tribune.

All the Crews at Poughkeepsie but

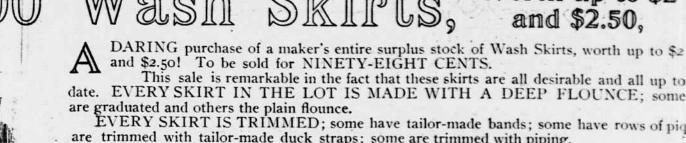

Among the alumni gathered at Poughkeepsie last week on the eve of the college boat races there was a great deal of spirited discussion regardi g the advisability of putting professional coaches in supreme control of the crews and allowing them to appear before the public as the rowing representatives of the colleges. Of the six crews that rowed last week on the Hudson all but Georgetown had professional coaches in absolute control. Said an alumnus of Columbia: "There are a lot of us at Columbia who don't believe in allowing a paid coach who never was in Columbia or any other college, and whose sole claim to recognition is his ability to pull a good stroke and to teach it, to represent the university in public and control the entire boating interests of the university. Let us have the professional coach by all means, have the professional coach by all means, but let him be only the technical instructor of the crew, and let there be a graduate coach as final authority and spokesman. As it is, the victory of any college nowadays is largely the victory of its particular coach, who is quoted and photographed and lauded ad nauseam. Harvard and Yale have the right idea. At Yale the professional coach is employed, but you never hear of him delivering treatises on Yale rowing. Mr. Allen represents the unirowing. Mr. Allen represents the university, and is its final rowing arbiter. Mr. Storrow occupies a similar place at Har-vard, and that is as it should be."

TRAINING COLLEGE OARSMEN. The Method Employed by Courtney at Cornell University.

New York Tribune. The training that the Cornell crew squad receives under the experienced hand of Courtney has perhaps no more prominent feature than its rigid discipline. Courtney allows, of course, no smoking, and insists on regular, early hours of going to bed and getting up, but he goes beyond many other coaches in supervising personally the men's diet, and especially in forbidding absolutely the use of liquor. " Crew training at Cornell begins in the fall, when the freshman candidates are coached by Courtney in pair-oared and four-oared "tubs," the coach occupying the coxswain's seat. This training corrects the freshmen's greater faults, and gets them in shape to begin work on the gymnasium rowing machines in January with the 'varsity candidates.

The latter's required training does not begin until January seltanged.

gin until January, salthough many of them gin until January, nathabugh many of them row in the fall in scrib eights or in the class races. On the machines Courtney experiments with combinations and "tries out" the men thoroughly, although it often happens that men in the second in the material on the material whose endurance is strongest on the material water. in the water. Courtney puts the men on the water just as soon as the ice is out of the Cayuga Lake inlet, on which Cornell's boat house is situated. The 'varsity candidates row in eight-oared shells at once, but the freshmen practice one or two weeks in the "tubs" and in an eight-oared barge, com-"tubs" and in an eight-oared barge, com-paratively heavy, and built to save the wear on the lighter shells. Practice con-tinues on the inlet until Cayuga Lake is calm enough to row on. Then work is transferred to the larger body of water, when four-mile and two-mile courses are marked out, one on each side of the lake.

and rubdown, and dinner at the training table, and it is rarely that the oarsman gets to his room before 9 o'clock. During the spring vacation, and during and after the June examinations, when university work is all or partly over, the hours are, of course, different from these, and the men row twice a day instead of once. Courtney insists on punctuality. Long, who steered the 'varsity race last year, has had good reason to realize this fact this year, for a day's unexcused absence cost him his place. Despite his rigid discipline, however, Courtney is popular with under-graduates, alumni and faculty as no other Cornell coach ever has been.

Griffiths Won Grand American. Eugene C. Griffiths of Pascoag, R. I. duplicated his victory in the Grand American handicap at live birds last April at Interstate Park, L. I., by winning the Grand American handicap at inanimate targets from a field of seventy-eight contestants at the same place yesterday. After a splendid exhibition with the shotgun, he beat all the others, breaking 95 out of 100 targets. F. V. Carlough of Rutherford, N. J., shooting from the sixteen-yard mark, broke 93 and secured second money, while Chas. Wagner of Schenectady, N. Y., broke 92 at a distance of seventeen yards from the W. R. Crosby of O'Fallon, Ill., was the only one of the four men on the twenty-two yard mark to finish in the front rank, as he took thirteenth place, having missed thirteen targets. On the whole the condi-

at Cape Town affords the country another proof of the false economy involved in un-derpaying our consular and diplomatic representatives. Mr. Stowe resigned because he has grown weary of administering a six-thousand-dollar office on a salary of three thousand dollars. Private means alone enabled him to stick to his post as long as he has done, and to keep with him his family of three persons, whose traveling expenses cost him nearly a year's sal-ary. Besides this claim upon his inade-quate pay, there are the appeals of stranded Americans and the demands of house rent, which other governments fur-nish their representatives, to say nothing of the general cost of living at Cape Town which Mr. Stowe says is the most expen-sive place in the world. Mr. Stowe draws attention to the fact that American trade interests in Cape Colony are more extensive and important than those of any other country, and yet four other nations with which we may claim to rank in size, wealth and power pay their representatives more than we do Germany, our great commercial rival, pays her consul ten thousand dollars, or more than three times as much; France pays seven thousand five hundred; little Holfive thousand; and even Spain, which does not rank high as a commercial nation, pays twelve hundred dollars more than we do. Similar comparisons would doubtless reveal a like situation in other ports where we are hoping to enlarge our trade.

Boats to Do Dray Work. From the Chicago Post.

From the Chicago Post.

That there is to be established on the Chicago river a system of package freight lighters to supplement the shipping facilities is now an assured fact. First steps in this direction were taken when the property of State and South Water streets changed hands. This property embraces three holdings, the last of which was turned over today. Local capitalists have bought the property, paying $495,000 for it. For private reasons their names are withheld temporarily, but the object of their purchase is to build a large warehouse. This will be stafted as soon as possession can be obtained, which means May 1, 1902, at the Meanwhile plans are in progress for the formation of an organization which will conduct the lighterage system in conjunction with the warehouse. Promoters of the scheme nave been considering it since the first of the year.

Pennsylvania Appropriation Bills.

Governor Stone's action on the 260 bills left with him at the close of the legislature was made public at Harrisburg, Pa. A reduction of about $2,250,000 has been made in the appropriation bills, to keep within the estimated state revenues of $26,500,000 for the next two years. Among the bills approved is the measure appropriating $4,000,000 to complete the state capitol building in Harrisburg, and $1,000,-000 to cover the deficiency in the state appropriation to public schools.

Death of Coin Press Builder. Arthur Orr, builder of the coining presses used for many years in the United States mints in Philadelphia, Carson City, San Francisco and New Orleans, is dead at his summer home at Moorestown, N. J., aged

For many years he made a specialty of mint work, building nearly all the coining presses for the government, many of which are still in use. He also built coining and milling presses for the governments of Mexico, Peru and Chile. For nearly fifty The Infanta Isabella is an enthusiast in all field sports, and she is now horrifying the stricter sort of persons in Madrid by tearing about the streets in a motor car which she drives herself.
